"CONFUSION" IN READINESS BY THE C. C. H. S. SENIORS

After weeks of hard work with the seniors' three-act comedy, Confusion, is now in readiness for presentation, and an engagement will be booked in the Elks theater or the fairgrounds in the immediate future.

The show promises to be one of the best ever seen in Carbon county. As the name suggests, the plot is brimming over with complications. Milton Olsen, as Mortimer Mumbleford, a newly-wed business man, is very anxious to get out of the honeymoon groove, which entails to much "telling and cooing" for his happiness. Irene Thomas, as home, his wife, sadly observes her husband's reluctance to bestow affection and resolves to secretly secure a pet dog to "fondle and caress." Zach Perry, as Christopher Ullward, bachelor well along in the forties, but very much taken up with Lauretta Tickley, an old maid of the same age or thereabouts, promises to supply the pet dog. James and Maria, the secretly married servants, find their baby sick. From then on, confusion reigns supreme. Misunderstandings, augmented by lies and intrigues, make the baby and the pet dog one and inseparable, causing no end of entanglements and fun.

Milton Olsen, the manager for the seniors, is enthusiastic over the prospects of the play. After six weeks of persistent rehearsing under the able supervision of Miss Hurst, he is satisfied that the show will go off without a hitch.

PRUNING.

The subject of pruning is one in which nearly all are interested, for we find nearly every resident has at least a few trees on his lot, in which he is interested, and would like to see maximum yield coupled with proper treatment.

Pruning should be done every year from the time when the "chip" is set out at one or two years up until the tree has served its time and is ready for the wood pile.

Much depends upon the early pruning of the tree. One should see that when young the tree is so pruned as to be "balanced," with three to five main branches, with a distance of from four to six inches between each limb. This method followed will prevent the splitting off of big limbs so often found. There will be no weak forks and the tree can hold a wonderfully big load.

Once begun properly, there will be no trouble. Then each year succeeding keep the tree well balanced. Don't allow it to become too heavy; keep fairly well cleaned out, avoid disease and prevent wood growth at the expense of the fruit growth.

Fruit trees differ. Owners should understand the characteristics of each fruit and then they can prune more intelligently. For example, we find on peach trees that it is the new wood that bears the fruit and hence this new growth should not be cut out while in apples, this is not true. It is the old wood and not the new growth, including "suckers," that bears the fruit spurs found on apple trees.

Regarding the proper time of the year for pruning we find that a very good time is near the end of the dormant period, and as the spring growth begins. Healing of wounds is more rapid at this time. Dr. L. H. Hatch, of the Utah Agricultural College, says that if done in February, March and April the wound heals over very rapidly as soon as growth starts in the spring. There is also less likelihood of wounds drying and causing winter killing than when pruned earlier in the season.

Farmers are generally not so busy in February, March or April as they are later on, and so should attend to some pruning at this time.—M. C. Maughan.
